School zones across city to get speed cameras

Bronx. The speed cameras will protect children's lives, the mayor said.

New Yorkers who speed through a school zone may be more likely to get a ticket in the coming weeks, whether or not a uniformed officer actually pulls them over.

Mayor Bill de Blasio announced the citywide installation of speed cameras in school zones on Tuesday. Cameras are already operate at 23 school zones, de Blasio said, and a total of 140 fixed and mobile cameras will be up and running in the next two years.

The city would use mobile speed zone vehicles in addition to speed zone cameras, the city said. / WENDY JOAN BIDDLECOMBE, METRO

Change behavior

"Speed cameras fundamentally change reckless behavior."

De Blasio

"It's an exciting time, the beginning of each school year," de Blasio said. "There's a lot going on, there's a lot of people moving around, the last thing you want to worry about is a car speeding by and potentially endangering the lives of children."

The mayor announced the effort, which is part of his Vision Zero plan, outside of P.S. 95 in the Bronx. De Blasio said the intersection of Sedgwick and Hillman Avenues is marked as a "high crash corridor" by the Department of Transportation, and from 2008-2012 the corner saw 42 traffic incidents, including seven pedestrian injuries.

The mayor also said traffic fatalities is the leading cause of death in children under 14, and speeding drivers kill more people in New York than drunk and distracted drivers combined.

DOT Commissioner Polly Trottenberg said her department is still determining the ratio between the fixed cameras and mobile units, which are vehicles with cameras installed. Trottenberg said the cameras cost between $90,000 and $115,000 each. The city has collected $9 million in speed camera tickets this year, Trottenberg said, and the number will double by the end of 2014.

G train running again after five-week hiatus

G train service between Brooklyn and Queens returned as planned on Tuesday after several stops were closed for five weeks.

Starting on July 25, crews began repairing the Greenpoint Tubes, which were damaged two years ago when Superstorm Sandy flooded the tracks with 3 million gallons of salt water.

The Greenpoint Avenue stop in Brooklyn and 21st Street and Court Square stops in Queens were closed and replaced by shuttle buses.

The MTA said Tuesday that crews installed 14,000 feet of continuous welded rails and cleaned 9,000 feet of track during the closure.

Electrical cables and wires were installed, and insulators repaired on the third rail. New tunnel lighting was installed, stairways were repaired and stations repainted, among other maintenance efforts.

"Superstorm Sandy's devastating impact on our Subway network posed a challenge never before faced by our organization," NYC Transit President Carmen Bianco said. "However, we rose to this challenge and are rebuilding our system better and stronger than before,"

Last week, elected officials and subway riders rallied, calling on the MTA to keep a transfer between the Broadway G and Lorimer J and M stops. The free transfer ended on Tuesday, an MTA spokeswoman said.

Man kills self by decapitation

A 51-year-old man decapitated himself by chaining his neck to a pole, getting into his car and stomping on the gas, police said on Tuesday.

The gory scene in Hunts Point was under investigation as an apparent suicide.

Police said Tomas Rivera, of Port Jervis, went to Longfellow Avenue at 9:20 a.m. and wrapped a chain around a pole.

He then entered his white Honda Pilot and put the other end of the chain around his neck, according to police. Once inside, he hit the gas pedal, causing the chain to yank off his head. REUTERS

Poll says New Yorkers back DNC convention coming to city

Most New York City voters said that they want to play host to the 2016 Democratic National Convention, according to a poll released on Tuesday, a week after a city police union raised safety concerns and urged organizers to shop for another venue.

The Quinnipiac University poll shows New York City voters welcome the event to nominate the party's presidential candidate by a ratio of 3-to-1. Republicans voters, however, were against the idea 52 percent to 38 percent. REUTERS

A trip in time to the American Revolution in Brooklyn

On a beautifully Sunday afternoon, I went to Green-Wood Cemetery to watch a group of Revolutionary War reenactors celebrate the Battle of Brooklyn. Dressed in their 18th-century best, they stuffed a cannon with balls of tinfoil and shot them toward the harbor. "Cover your ears," warned a man in a tricorn hat before the boom.

Benjamin Franklin walked around with his kite, ostensibly waiting for lightning to strike, but the sky was stormless, a summer blue.

I walked to the top of Battle Hill to look at the statue of Minerva. In her helmet and armored breastplate, she waves down to the Statue of Liberty, who seems not to notice.

Back down the hill, the Regimental Band of the United States Merchant Marine Academy was settling into formation, ready for the parade.

I went in search of a restroom. While waiting in line, a man with a thick Italian accent, who has worked at the cemetery for 30 years, informed me that superior toileting facilities could be found in the Columbarium, where the cremated people are kept.

"What makes that bathroom better?" I asked.

"Fuggedaboutit," the man said. "This one's like, military. That's one's for a king!"

And so it all came back around—to the American Revolution and the Battle of Brooklyn, a story of militiamen and kings, and the fight for a better everything.

Rep. Grimm trial for fraud is set to take place in December

Staten Island. The politician will go to court for charges of tax evasion after midterm elections.

Grimm also made headlines when he was caught on camera in January threatening to throw a reporter off a balcony in the U.S. Capitol. / GETTY IMAGES

A federal judge on Tuesday set Dec. 1 as the start of the tax-evasion trial of New York congressman Michael Grimm, one month after an election in which the Republican seeks a third term in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Grimm, a former FBI agent who represents parts of Brooklyn and Staten Island, appeared before Judge Pamela Chen in District Court in Brooklyn. He did not speak during or after the hearing.

A lawyer for Grimm had asked Chen to schedule the trial in January, saying jurors could be prejudiced by negative attack advertisements from Democrats. A month's delay could provide "a cooling off period" after the Nov. 4 election, said the lawyer, Jeffrey Neiman.

"We're obviously in the heart of an election cycle," Neiman said.

Chen disagreed, saying biased jurors could be weeded out during jury selection.

Prosecutors had sought to start the trial in October, weeks ahead of the election.

Grimm was indicted in April on charges of fraud, perjury and conspiracy tied to his New York restaurant, Healthalicious. He faces up to 20 years in prison if convicted. Grimm, 44, has denied the charges.

Meanwhile, a former fundraiser for Grimm, Diana Durand, is due in court on Wednesday to enter a plea related to charges that she arranged illegal contributions to his 2010 campaign, according to a court calendar. REUTERS

McMillan back in run for governor

After a failed 2010 gubernatorial campaign and a 2013 mayoral campaign, Jimmy McMillan, the man behind the "Rent is Too Damn High" party is back in the race for Governor.

The 67-year-old is seeking to get on the ballot for the governor's race this fall and has filed petitions with the State Board of Elections.

McMillan became a viral sensation after repeating his party's mantra, "the rent is too damn high," during a 2010 gubernatorial debate. MELANIE DOSTIS

Top cops enroll in Twitter course

NYPD officers are reportedly getting a lesson on the best way to use 140 characters or less.

The New York Post reported Tuesday top officers on the force are attending a social media class at John Jay College. The first memo handed out read "USE COMMON SENSE," the paper reported.

The commanding officers are being urged to post public information, such as street closings and crime statistics.

Last month, Capt. Thomas Harnisch of the 25th Precinct apologized after sending out a comment on a woman struck by a train and using the precinct's account instead of his own.

Earlier this year, Twitter campaign #myNPYD backfired when people posted photos of police brutality.

Atlantic City. Revel Casino closes doors

Shortly before sunrise Tuesday, Morgan Capezzera reclined on the roulette table at the Revel Casino in her bikini and snapped a selfie before the Atlantic City gambling hall shut its doors for good.

"I love Revel," said Capezzera, 30, who spent the day at the casino.

She was one of few fans who came out for the closing night of a 2-year-old casino once heralded by Gov. Chris Christie as a new model for the down-on-its-luck New Jersey shore gambling hub.

Management advertised a 5 a.m. closing time intended to give gamblers time to cash out before the doors closed an hour later. But with just a dozen people, the roulette and blackjack tables remained open till almost 6 a.m. Meanwhile, state troopers patrolled the floor to guard against vandalism, which had marred the closing of the Atlantic Club earlier this year. Hard-hit city

The $2.4 billion project went into bankruptcy for the second time this year and is one of four Atlantic City casinos to announce that it would shut its doors this year.

- Its closure takes its toll on the budget in a city where the property tax base is expected to fall to $10 billion by 2015, less than half its 2010 level.

ISIS issues video of beheading of US journalist

Execution. In the video, Steven Sotloff says he's "paying the price" for the U.S. intervention in Iraq with his life.

The Islamic State released a video on Tuesday purporting to show the beheading of American hostage Steven Sotloff, raising the stakes in its confrontation with Washington over U.S. air strikes on its insurgents in Iraq.

A masked figure in the video also issued a threat against a British hostage, a man the group named as David Haines, and warned governments to back off "this evil alliance of America against the Islamic State."

American journalist Steven Sotloff / VIDEO SCREEN GRAB

Quoted

"So just as your missiles continue to strike our people, our knife will continue to strike the necks of your people."

The man in the video

The purported executioner appeared to be the same British-accented man who appeared in an Aug. 19 video showing the killing of American journalist James Foley, and it showed a similar desert setting.

In both videos, the captives wore orange jumpsuits.

"I'm back, Obama, and I'm back because of your arrogant foreign policy toward the Islamic State, because of your insistence on continuing your bombings in Amerli, Zumar and the Mosul Dam, despite our serious warnings," the man said, addressing the U.S. president. REUTERS

SoftBank to sell robot in US within 12 months

Billionaire Masayoshi Son will start selling his humanoid robots named "Pepper" at Sprint Corp. stores in the U.S. by next summer, part of SoftBank Corp.'s push to take the technology beyond factory floors.

SoftBank also has received between 300 and 400 inquiries about Pepper from companies in finance, food service and education, Fumihide Tomizawa, chief executive officer of SoftBank Robotics, said this week. The 4-foot robot dances, makes jokes and estimates human emotions based on expressions. Pepper will go on sale in Japan in February for $1,900; the company hasn't yet set a U.S. price. BLOOMBERG

Apple: We're not at fault in celeb breach

Celebrities hacked. Nude photos were obtained on iCloud.

The week before a crucial launch of its new iPhone, Apple Inc. said intimate photos of celebrities including Oscar-winner Jennifer Lawrence were leaked online through the apparent hacking of individual iCloud accounts.

Apple rushed to restore confidence in its systems' security, saying the celebrity photo scandal that also ensnared swimsuit model Kate Upton, actress Kirsten Dunst and possibly dozens more was the result of targeted attacks on accounts storing personal data and not a direct breach of Apple systems.

"We have discovered that certain celebrity accounts were compromised by a very targeted attack on user names, passwords and security questions, a practice that has become all too common on the Internet," Apple said in a statement.

"None of the cases we have investigated has resulted from any breach in any of Apple's systems including iCloud or Find My iPhone."

The celebrity hacking nevertheless ranks among the highest-profile public fiascos for Apple in recent years. REUTERS

Airlines. Florida bound flight diverted over seat dispute

Recent disputes over reclining seats have made traveling the "friendly skies" not so friendly. / COLOURBOX

An argument over leg room and reclining seats forced a Florida-bound flight from New York to divert to a different airport late on Monday, the third such incident of a midair disruption caused by passengers in about a week.

Delta Air Lines said that "out of an abundance of caution" the captain of Flight 2370 from New York LaGuardia to West Palm Beach chose to land instead at the closest airport, Jacksonville, where local law enforcement removed one passenger.

It did not elaborate on the "disruption," but a witness told Jacksonville TV station WJXT TV-4 that an argument broke out during the flight between one woman who wanted to recline her seat and another in the row behind who wanted to sleep while resting on her tray table.

The witness said one of the women became loud and abusive when a flight attendant was called.

The aircraft later flew on to West Palm Beach where it landed shortly after 11 p.m., a couple of hours late. Delta representatives did not immediately return a call for comment.

Days

The latest incident came just five days after an American Airlines flight to Paris from Miami was diverted to Boston following an argument between passengers over a reclining seat.

In the American Airlines case, a 60-year-old Frenchman was subdued by plainclothes U.S. air marshals and charged in federal court with interfering with flight crew members, prosecutors said.

Just days before that, a United Airlines flight from Newark, New Jersey, to Denver on Aug. 24 had to be diverted to Chicago due to an argument between passengers over a device that stops the seat in front from reclining.

The airline said one of those involved was using a Knee Defender, a small wedge-like gadget that forces the seat in front to stay upright. Many carriers, including United, ban the use of the device. REUTERS

Police search for teens who escaped from detention center

Nashville police were searching on Tuesday for eight teens still at large after 32 boys escaped from a detention center overnight, a spokesman said.

At around 11 p.m. on Monday, some of the teens began pushing their way out of the dorms at the Woodland Hills Youth Development Center in Nashville, said Rob Johnson, director of communications for the Tennessee Department of Children's Services.

Johnson said room doors are not locked at the facility, which holds boys 14 to 18 years old.

Nashville police /GETTY IMAGES

He said a number of the detainees made it out into the yard and found a weak spot in the perimeter fence and got out underneath it.

Of the 32 detainees who got out, two were taken into custody immediately, and 13 were caught or surrendered to authorities through the early hours of the morning.

Johnson said most of the children who escaped have felony convictions for property crimes, assault and robbery. But none is in for homicide or murder. REUTERS

Photos of alleged 9/11 '20th hijacker' stays classified

A federal appeals court on Tuesday said photos of a Saudi national imprisoned at Guantanamo Bay who U.S. officials have said intended to be the "20th hijacker" in the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks should stay classified, in the interest of protecting national security.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York said the government plausibly showed that releasing images of Mohammed al-Qahtani, who was subject to interrogation techniques that a government official likened to torture, could endanger personnel in Afghanistan and elsewhere. REUTERS

Africa. US airstrike in Somalia targeted al Shabaab leader

An airstrike in Somalia by U.S. armed forces targeted the leader of the Islamist militant group al Shabaab, Ahmed Abdi Godane, Somali and U.S. officials said on Tuesday, but they said it was unclear whether he was killed in the attack.

Other U.S. officials said they believed Godane was killed in the strike late on Monday against a location where senior members of the al Qaeda-linked group were meeting, but the U.S. government had not confirmed that or had given further details.

If Godane were killed, it would be a major victory against the al Shabaab militants fighting the Western-backed government of Somalia, which is also supported by African Union troops.

Since taking charge in 2008, Godane has restyled the group as a global player in the al Qaeda franchise — a transformation that was highlighted when it killed at least 67 people in an attack on a Kenyan shopping mall in September last year. REUTERS

Collector sale. Marilyn Monroe silent sex film to be kept private

A 15-minute film of Marilyn Monroe engaging in oral sex with an unidentified man will be kept from public view by a New York businessman who has bought it for $1.5 million, the broker of the deal said this week.

Memorabilia collector Keya Morgan said he recently arranged the sale of the silent, black-and-white film from the son of a dead FBI informant who possessed it to a wealthy Manhattan businessman who wants to protect Monroe's privacy.

"The gentleman who bought it said, out of respect for Marilyn, he's not going to make a joke of it and put it on the Internet and try to exploit her," said memorabilia collector Keya Morgan. "That's not his intention and I would never get my name involved if that were to happen."

Monroe was rumored to have had an affair with President John F. Kennedy, and Morgan said then FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, a Kennedy rival, went to great lengths to try to prove it was Kennedy in the film.

'Masters of Sex' to recruit old masters

The folks behind Showtime's 'Masters of Sex' are testing out a new tactic to attract big-name additions to their cast: having current cast-members beg shamelessly. First up, series star Lizzy Caplan has a request for Susan Sarandon: 'Susan, be my mom!' Caplan says, according to E! News. 'She's the sexiest woman. She's amazing. I'm such a huge fan.' And co-star Allison Janney has some casting ideas as well, namely a certain multiple Oscar-winner. 'I think Meryl Streep and I should play a pair of sex therapists,' she says. 'We can be like Helen Hunt's character in 'The Sessions.' We can help people who can't have orgasms have orgasms. That would be pretty cool.'

The bad boys of pop music are at it again

Yesterday was not a banner day for guys we shall somewhat reluctantly refer to as the "bad boys of pop music." Canadian Police announced yesterday that Justin Bieber was arrested and charged with assault and dangerous driving over the weekend, and Chris Brown pleaded guilty to misdemeanor assault.

Let's start with the Biebs: This weekend he was reportedly driving with Selena Gomez near Stratford, Ontario, where he grew up, when his vehicle collided with another and then a "physical altercation" ensued.

ABC News reports that Bieber's lawyer emailed a statement saying, "Justin Bieber and Selena Gomez' peaceful retreat in Stratford this weekend was unfortunately disrupted by the unwelcome presence of paparazzi."

Bieber is already facing an assault charge in Toronto and is still on probation after being convicted of vandalism for egging his neighbor's house.

Meanwhile, Chris Brown's guilty plea in Washington, D.C. ended up with the star apologizing for breaking the nose of a fan who tried to thrust himself into a picture with Brown last year. Brown was sentenced to time served (he spent more than two months in jail for a probation violation) and ordered to pay $150 in court costs. Brown remains on probation until 2015 for the charges of beating Rihanna in 2009.

More legal woes for Bieber?

Though photographers weren't able to get great shots of Chris Brown outside of court, at least he didn't try to punch them.

Cyrus still loves former fiance

Miley Cyrus and Liam Hemsworth may have broken off their engagement almost a year ago, but that doesn't mean she doesn't still have feelings for the Australian actor. "I love Liam. Liam loves me," she tells Australia's "Sunday Night" during an interview. Of course, she might just be saying that because she doesn't want to upset any Australians on their home turf. On the more controversial topic of her open indulgences,

The couple in 2013

Cyrus gets a bit defensive: "I put pictures of me smoking weed, I'm not going to lie, on my Instagram," she says. "It's not like I'm sitting around telling a bunch of kids to do a bunch of drugs."

Feds on case of the massive nude pic leak

UPTON

Jennifer Lawrence, Kate Upton and the other victims of this weekend's massive iCloud hacking and nude photo leak can rest a bit easier knowing that the feds are on the case. "The FBI is aware of the allegations concerning computer intrusions and the unlawful release of material involving high-profile individuals and is addressing the matter," a Bureau spokesperson says in a statement to NBC News. Similarly, a rep for Apple says the company is looking into the security breach. "We take user privacy very seriously and are actively investigating this report," the rep says.

Dakota Fanning: All grown up

Interview. "The Last of Robin Hood" star is sick of thinking about her age.

Until she read the script for "The Last Days of Robin Hood," Dakota Fanning had never heard the story of notoriously loose Hollywood star Errol Flynn (Kevin Kline) dying in the arms of teenager Beverly Aadland (Fanning). But it's a role she loved performing, even if now, at 20, she's pretty much done with playing characters who are younger than her actual age.

Researching Aadland

"I really didn't do that much research. I looked at certain things, like how she looked and how she wore her hair and what her makeup was like. There's an article from her perspective, but there's a lot of things that are from other people's perspective. I wanted to have my own point of view of what happened instead of reading Florence's [her mother's] book. Kevin did a lot of [research], so if I needed to know any facts I could ask him."

The responsibility that comes with playing a real person

"You do feel a responsibility, but you also have to let that go, to a certain extent. It's ultimately a movie, and it's never going to be exactly the way it was. You are, in some ways, creating your own character."

What attracted her to the role as a role

"Minus all the surreal or controversial details of the story, she was just a young girl. She was 15 — she wasn't even starting her life yet. She got caught up in this whirlwind and she was very naive. You do see her find her way and mature and be happy and strong — and then you also see her get lost. She didn't have anybody to rely on after Errol died. It was interesting to play someone who went full circle and around again."

Those 1950s costumes

"The first week you wear the clothes, it feels so foreign and strange. By the end it's your dress. It feels so normal. And retro's in now. Sometimes it's odd to me when people wear one style of clothing all the time. I wear different things all the time. But it's a very flattering shape, retro."

IN "THE LAST DAYS OF ROBIN HOOD," DAKOTA FANNING PLAYS BEVERLY AADLAND, THE YOUNG GIRL WHO WAS INVOLVED WITH AN OLD ERROL FLYNN. GETTY IMAGES

Trying to avoid playing high school roles again

"I find that weird. High school was so long ago. Going back that would be weird. When I see people who are 30 playing high school students, I'm like, 'God, that's so strange.' In this, I was playing younger than I was. But I try not to think about age too much. So much of my life has revolved around what age I am. I'm kind of bored of it."

Satisfy burger cravings without a beefy budget

Burgers have come a long way from a hunk of meat resembling a hockey puck on a barbecue. Today's burgers use top-quality meats, combinations of cuts and interesting toppings. Here are some of my favorite places to get a burger fix at a good price.

Island Burger

Two locations: This place is the king of toppings, with more than 35. You can also feast on tender chicken "churrasco" sandwiches with the same toppings; both are cooked to absolute perfection. I find it hard to choose but will usually go for The Mona Lisa ($14.95) with mozzarella, pesto, sauteed onions, mushrooms, peppers and Parmesan cheese on a ciabatta roll. Start with the grilled Thai chicken sticks for $8.25. The beach decor makes this tiny place feel like a vacation.

Merrion

1840 Second Ave.: Hold onto your buns! The hamburger, or vegan burger, here is free with the purchase of a beer; or score a free order of wings with a pitcher. Merrion is a great choice to watch the big game, with 20 beers on tap and specials during big events. The burgers are basic, but they're tasty and larger than you'd expect. Splurge on the waffle fries or sweet potato fries for $3.

Corner Bistro

331 W. Fourth St.: This corner dive is an NYC classic, serving up some of the juiciest burgers. Expect no frills: The menu consists of burgers, grilled cheese and chili. For $7 you get a burger cooked to order and served on a sesame seed bun. It's so good I usually get a second one for dessert.

Is NYC's townhouse market undervalued?

Real estate.
The gap between single-family homes and new condos is widening as buyers pay a premium for apartment amenities.

The townhouse at 400 West St. is on the market for $21.5 million. /PROVIDED

Realty television interior design duo Cortney and Robert Novogratz paid $4.3 million for their nearly 7,200-square-foot townhouse in the West Village in 2007. They recently listed the home for $21.5 million, or just under $3,000 per square foot.

While that price may seem high, the Novogratzes, who had their own HGTV show, "Home by Novogratz," previously listed the house, which is located at 400 West St., in 2009 for $25 million to no avail. And yet, compared with prices for new development condos in the neighborhood, the property, which is being listed by Douglas Elliman broker Raphael De Niro, is a relative steal, according to some top brokers.

That relative bargain stems from the fact that the price spread between townhouses and condos is widening, thanks to the explosion of luxury condos in recent years.

Halstead Property's Louise Phillips Forbes went a step further, saying that on a price-per-foot basis townhouses are significantly undervalued in New York City. Compared with the Novogratzes' asking price of $3,000 a foot, nearby condos range from $3,750 to $4,450 a foot.

The townhouse at 66 Midwood St. in Brooklyn sold for $2.35 million in July. / PROVIDED

"What [my clients] can get in a co-op or condo is nowhere near what you can buy, on a square-foot-age basis, in a townhouse," Forbes said.

While townhouse prices are climbing, they are not rising nearly as fast as condo prices. "The biggest compliment I ever received was when someone said, 'It feels like you're not in Manhattan,'" says Casey DeBois, pictured here in her kitchen. /ALL PHOTOS NATASHA JAHANGIR

Room with

Real estate. Interior designer Casey DeBois' posh pad in the New York by Gehry building makes a case for mixing high and low design for a look that's all your own.

Casey DeBois didn't spend much time debating the brand-new apartment she checked out with her husband last fall.

"When we got there, we were just like, 'This place is insane,'" remembers DeBois of the much-hyped New York by Gehry. "There's an ocean view from Manhattan – compared to our previous apartment, where the view was a brick wall."

Less than a year later, it's almost impossible to believe that she hasn't always lived in the 1,000-square-foot home. After recovering from the breathtaking view (it's true – if not blinded by jealousy, you can see the breakers), you're struck by the space's elegant comfort and flashes of wit.

"I really like clean, modern interiors that reflect my personality," says the 29-year-old, who is an interior designer by trade. "My aesthetic is mid-century modern meets farmhouse, but it's a little bit of everything. I really wanted to mix things up for my own home."

The result is an eclectic yet restrained space that joyfully blends high and low. A tufted statement sofa feels right at home next door to a trendy, Etsy-fueled gallery wall, while playful chalkboard paint warms up a well-equipped modern kitchen. While the neutral living room lets the windows do most of the Display-worthy items hold court on the coffee table.

Love her style? DeBois did let us in

Yup, that console is from Ikea.

1 Think ahead

If you're renting, remember that you'll be moving everything. "In Manhattan, you have to think, 'How long am I going to stay in the space, and what can I take with me?' Sectional sofas are never a good idea — who knows what the layout of your next place will be?"

2 Shop local

Although she has some pieces from retailers such as West Elm and Restoration Hardware, most of DeBois' apartment (and those of her clients) is furnished and trimmed with the help of small local shops and Etsy sellers. In New York, she likes Furnish Green and Horseman Antiques.

3 DIY with Ikea

Even DeBois breaks out the Ikea wrench once in awhile — not that you could tell. "I'm not afraid to use Ikea. My TV console is an Ikea piece, but I covered it with reclaimed wood flooring. My night stands are Ikea, but I put Anthropologie hardware on them," she says.

4 Think outside the frame

DeBois' apartment comes to life with art. One of her favorite finds — a woven straw piece — hangs above the couch in her office. She picked it up for $40 while strolling through the Flower District. She thinks it might have been roof thatching in a former life.

DeBois scored the pink vintage sofa in her office from Furnish Green, one of her favorite NYC stores.

DeBois' favorite paint is Benjamin Moore's rental-friendly "Simply White." "It's like a gallery white — art pops well against it," she says.

8 Spruce Street

Designed and appointed by famed architect Frank Gehry, 8 Spruce Street clocks in at 76 stories, making for views of the Atlantic Ocean, downtown and midtown skylines, the Brooklyn Bridge and the Statue of Liberty. But here's why we're making some new friends there: The sky-lit indoor swimming pool is framed by a wraparound outdoor sun deck.

Here's the view from DeBois' living room window.

talking, a color-drenched office inspires with pink sofa, vibrant layered patterns and a trio of wall-mounted pinata heads.

Despite the professional touches and Instagram-inspiring coffee table clutter, it's a space that was designed with plenty of guests (and a resident pup, Tuck) in mind. Furniture moves easily for dinner parties, nothing is too precious to be called seating, and the well-stocked bar cart doesn't get dusty.

"I have some design rules, but ultimately I find that I design a lot of happy spaces," says DeBois. "I think about first impressions — what do you want your space to say? In the end, you just want to feel at home."

A chalkboard wall is one way to lighten up a standard kitchen.

5 Splurge smart

Sometimes, it's worth letting your credit card feel the burn. "I'd splurge on a good pair of accent chairs, and art is always a good idea," she says. "If you buy a quality vintage chair, it's going to keep its value — whereas you'll have a hard time trying to re-sell a West Elm piece."

6 Don't forget the little things

You don't need fancy designer pieces to charm the pants off guests. "I'm all about the smaller details, like the vintage swivel sticks on my bar cart," she says. "I like to create visual interest with small vignettes."

Tip

Go custom

The Lucite table in DeBois' entryway feels perfect for the space because it was made for the space. However, it only cost around $300, including delivery. "I think a lot of people shy away from custom pieces because they think it's going to be too expensive, but custom doesn't have to be," she says.

DeBois ordered her Lucite console from Custom Acrylic Designs on Etsy.

Jillian Michaels' tips for looking sexy and staying motivated

Fitspiration. Cute new clothes are just one reason you'll want to hit the gym every day.

It might seem like a no-brainer for "The Biggest Loser" coach and fitness guru Jillian Michaels to expand her enterprise to include athletic wear, but Michaels says it's taken her eight years to get it right.

"To be honest with you, I've never been one to love workout clothes because they just haven't had a very cool aesthetic, and they haven't worn great over the years," Michaels tells us at the line's launch event.

Constantly being filmed and photographed in athletic gear has made Michaels hyperaware of how it looks, but she also wanted to put out a line that performed well at a price everyone could afford. "When I think about my customer, it's a student in college struggling to make ends meet, or a mom with two kids struggling to make ends meet, or someone in retirement struggling to make ends meet, so affordability was really important to me," Michaels says.

Impact by Jillian Michaels is available at Kmart; the most expensive clothing item is $25. The line consists of four categories: core, lifestyle, yoga and running. "Core you can really wear for everything, but yoga and running are both very sports-specific," she says. "For yoga, you really need a shirt that isn't going to ride up if you're doing a shoulder-stand or a zipper poking your leg when you're in pigeon. And for running, you need shirts and shorts that won't chafe."

Advice

Putting it to use

New gym clothes might be enough to get you excited for the first week of exercising, but Michaels says if you want to stay motivated, the key is to have a specific goal in mind. "It's very important to establish a 'why,'" Michaels says. "You'll choose exercise and a healthier meal over pizza and being lazy when you have a specific goal in mind, like feeling sexier with your partner or more confident at the office. Work with purpose is passion. Work without passion is punishment."

This log cabin was completely faked in some clever guy's basement — on the cheap. / MAKE ZINE

Man turns basement into fake log cabin

Many like to rent a log cabin to get away from the city. Owning one may be out of reach, but building one is a different story. It doesn't require a fortune, provided you have an extra room and carpentry skills.

Imgur user [oldblue] took an unused room in his basement and converted it to look like a 1950s-era log cabin's interior. He designed the cabin with lumber taken from shipping crates and stone found on the side of the road. The kicker is that the project cost a mere $107 in materials. And that $107 upped the price of his house by thousands. To view the full project breakdown, visit www.makezine.com

5 Strangest alarm clocks

It's about time we had an utterly bizarre alarm clock. British designer Joshua Renouf recently conjured up an alarm clock that wakes you up to a freshly brewed mug of coffee. Metro checks out some of the other clever wake-up devices on the market.

DMITRY BELYAEV, METRO WORLD NEWS

5 Donation alarm clock

Don't you dare press the Snooze button on the clock known as the SnuzNLuz! The alarm connects via Wi-Fi to your online bank account, and it donates your real money to an organization you definitely do not support. "Are you a butcher? Set your SnuzNLuz to donate to PETA. Are you a land developer? Set it to donate to the Wilderness Society," its website says. If you snooze, you lose — literally! www.thinkgeek.com, $39.99.

4 Rocket launcher

Three, two, one, lift off! This alarm is not that simple to shut down. It launches a rocket into your room and the only one way to disable its annoying sound is to find where it landed and place it back on the launch pad. You might want to wait until closed-window weather to start using it. Amazon, $20

3 Blender alarm clock

What's a kitchen item doing in the bedroom? This noisy device has a blender shape, filled with plastic beans. Upon your set wake-up time, the blender alarm clock will start to vociferously brew your sleeping brain. www.beboxx.com, $25

2 Laser target alarm clock with gun

Sometimes you just want to kill your clock. Here's a chance to do just that. Put it in front of your bed and when it's time to wake up, shoot it with a laser gun. Walmart, $20

1 Carpet alarm clock

This alarm clock forces you to physically get out of bed and stand up. It doesn't stop until you start your day and step on the clever carpet. Amazon, $170

Investing shouldn't be a scheme

Re: 'Companies revolutionizing the world' (Metro, Aug. 26) Columnist Timothy Sykes does not even have the goal of "investing" in promising businesses. His history in junk stocks exposes someone who has taken the new approach to investing — don't look for promising companies, look for a minute edge in a trade and execute it. It's just the modern version of the gambling hall, not "investing" at all. Those who worship the filthy lucre have done a complete job in perverting the purpose of human life — now, the only goal is riches. How they are acquired is of no importance.

5 Jets storylines to watch this year

NFL. The Jets have no shortage of storylines as they begin their sixth season under coach Rex Ryan.

Visit Metro.us for our Giants preview before it runs in print tomorrow.

The Jets haven't necessarily dominated on the field the past five seasons, but they've always been the dominant source of news off the field in New York.

Last year was quiet in New York though, as head coach Rex Ryan barely clung to his job under general manager John Idzik.

The odd couple enters 2014 with the same quarterback — now with a year of experience — but also with raised expectations.

No one expected Ryan to carry a depleted roster with a rookie QB to an 8-8 record and playoff relevancy. Now, his job may be on the line for the exact opposite reason as 2013: The Jets must make the playoffs for the first time in four seasons — or else.

MARK OSBORNE
@MetroNYSports
mark.osborne@metro.us

1 Growing pains

For all the conjecture, Jets fans got about what they should've expected out of a rookie quarterback last season.

Geno Smith was successful at times, and downright awful at times. But the positive was he showed improvement over the final four games of the season and saved his coach's job in the process.

And remember, Smith's top receivers last season were Jeremy Kerley (43 catches) and David Nelson (36 catches). It is inarguable the team had the worst receiving corps in the NFL.

There are fewer excuses this season with the addition of a legitimate No. 1 receiver in Eric Decker and a top pick at tight end in Jace Amaro.

Smith had a solid preseason (23-of-33, 268 yards, one touchdown, one interception), but it remains to be seen how long the leash will be for the sophomore QB.

GENO SMITH HAS 12 TDS AND 21 INTERCEPTIONS IN 2013.
ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

2 Not so special

Ryan has always received credit as a defensive genius. He's deserved it for the most part, but talk has been decidedly quiet about just how average it was in 2013.

They were ranked 11th in the NFL in total defense and 19th in scoring defense.

The secondary, now absent Antonio Cromartie, is a big factor, but the defensive front seven has gotten a pass. There's no question Sheldon Richardson and Muhammad Wilkerson are elite talents on the line, but the Jets were in the middle of the pack as far as sacks go (tied for 13th with 41). The pass rush from the linebackers was minimal, and it seems unlikely that 33-year-old Calvin Pace will duplicate his career year of 10 sacks in 2013. Quinton Coples specifically needs to pick up the slack.

QUINTON COPLES HAD JUST 4 1/2 SACKS LAST SEASON.

3 Brutal schedule

An overlooked factor in last year's 8-8 season was the relatively easy schedule the Jets faced.

They were 2-3 against the four playoff teams they faced (1-1 against New England).

This year's schedule is unlikely to be as friendly. After an easy opener against Oakland, they're at Green Bay, home against Chicago and Detroit, at San Diego, home against Denver and away at New England. They'll be lucky to start 2-5.

4 Benchwarmer

One of the reasons the leash may be short on Smith is his backup. There's no question the Jets planned on starting Smith when they signed veteran Michael Vick.

But that doesn't mean they are determined to keep Vick tied to the bench if they start the season poorly.

Vick looked good in preseason, just like Smith, and there's likely a faction of the roster who'd like to see their idol play. But only if Smith struggles.

DEE MILLINER WON DEFENSIVE PLAYER OF THE WEEK FOR WEEK 17 AGAINST MIAMI.

5 Tenacious 'Dee'

The secondary is going to be ugly as the season gets underway. There's no way around that. But if Dee Milliner can look like he did late in 2013 when he comes back from a high ankle sprain, the cornerback situation might be passable enough to keep the Jets in playoff contention. If Milliner's ankle injury keeps him out through the first four or five weeks, though that seems unlikely, it will be a huge issue.

Jets expect playoffs after three years on sidelines

NFL. Rex Ryan and the Jets face high expectations as they still rebuild.

The same pundits who predicted the Jets would be woeful a season ago are now eyeing the playoffs for this revamped team. What a difference a season of exceeded expectations makes.

"I think the bottom line is you have to prove it," guard Willie Colon said. "You've got to do it on Sunday and stack wins and be competitive in your division."

The idea the Jets are postseason bound might be a bit optimistic, even if the locker room sells it as a possibility. In many ways they are still in the midst of a roster overhaul.

The Jets were a veteran-laden team that whimpered to a pitiful end to the 2012 season, with big-money contracts that were mostly all purged by the end of last season — Mark Sanchez and Santonio Holmes chief among them.

"There's also a lot of supposed-to-be's. We can't control that," running back Chris Ivory said. "The players are here, the coaches are here. We are the ones putting in the work. … There's always high expectations. We added a few great players to our team. Let's see what we do and where we go."

Quoted

"I think right now is all or nothing. Rex [Ryan] stressed that we have to win now. We've stomped our feet and pounded our chest enough."
